Comments: I have recently moved into the village and have become made to feel welcome within the community by local residents. It is clear to see that the Raddle is part of the community, using its time and land to host the village/church fayre annually, bringing the community together. This clearly shows that the Raddle would be an ideal place to host a local shop for community/visitor/tourist use, where there is also ample car parking, throughout the day and evening, personally, I have never experienced a problem with finding a parking space on site.

In addition, I feel that the addition of disabled toilet facilities would be classed as a reasonable adjustment under the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA 1995). With my father in law being disabled and living in the village, he has previously struggled with access into the toilets as they are currently unsuitable for wheelchair users. I also feel that as a single parent with a young son, the addition of a baby changing facility within a disabled unisex toilet facility would be beneficial for both myself and many other visitors to the pub with young families.
