Hi James,
No sure why I haven't had a consultation on this – I don't get consulted on all rear consultations but this is rather conspicuous and I have had previous discussions with the applicant about this.

No objection in principle. The extension is set back from the stone gable to expose as much of the stone quoins as possible. My only issue is the materials which I feel should be the same as the walling to which it is to be attached (the pebbledash is largely out of sight).

Condition: Facing materials, joinery details to windows and doors including heads and cills

Thanks
