Details of the pre-application advice received:

Dear Mr and Mrs Stoddart

Thank you for your email below. I'm sorry to read about the difficulty which appears to have arisen with your development.

I have looked at the photographs , reviewed the file and discussed the matter with the enforcement officer and the case officer and it seems clear to me that planning permission was granted for an extension to the existing dwelling. However, given that all 4 walls have been demolished and the dwelling is being rebuilt in it's entirety from slab level then what is being constructed is no longer an extension but is in fact a replacement dwelling.

Therefore unfortunately the planning permission that you have for an extension is no longer valid and you will require a fresh planning permission for a replacement dwelling.

If the dwelling that you apply for is identical in terms of it's finished appearance to the previous bungalow (as extended) shown on the approved plans for the extension I do not see any reason why permission would not be forthcoming. However, this would not negate the need to apply.

You will appreciate that the above is an informal opinion and does not constitute a decision of the Council under the Planning Acts.

I trust that the above is of assistance and some reassurance.
