Comments: common sense should tell you that building in front of another house on a bad corner and a bad pull out to a main road is not practical there is no room what so ever especially for all the lorries cars etc that would have to be there when delivering materials the space is to small its not level and it would interfere with other people coming in and out of that area in cars and and those that live near when this area was sectioned off from the house behind just to make it seem like the owner was doing something the supposed "builders" came in and completely obliterated my underground tv cables and didnt care less.. not having it and dont want it .. and i no i wouldnt be the only one.. it would cause a lot of hassle and disruption and noise and it needs to be left alone ..
