Comments: Having lived in the village of Ball Green for over 40 years, I moved to Gorsey Bank 4 years ago. When living so close to a working farm I accept that there are obvious disadvantages of cows mooing, tractors passing by at all hours, muck spreading taking place and the associated smells. At 90 years young and for the love and benefits of living where I do, so close to the countryside, one tolerates them all.

However, I am very anxious about the resubmission. A new barn was erected quite recently right opposite my outlook. I now have no views to admire at all, just the building but I have noticed a marked increase in noise levels, sometimes well into the night. Very often I think the barn is used to house young calves and the noises they make is very distracting. There seems to be far more farm machinery passing my window daily and the road can get very muddy especially when muck spreading is taking place.

At my age I can get very anxious when I hear noises and see lights flashing by my window, especially late at night when it's dark. Any further expansion to existing disturbances would be totally unacceptable and would create even more personal trauma to myself and all all those living in the immediate vicinity. Please please refuse these new plans.....
