

This architectural drawing shows a side elevation of a building with a complex roofline. The building features a main rectangular section with a gabled roof and a smaller, lower section to its right. The roof is depicted with horizontal lines, and the walls are shown with vertical lines. Several windows are visible: a small square window in the upper left, a larger rectangular window in the center, and a small square window in the lower right. A door is located in the lower right corner. The drawing includes three section lines: A-A, B-B, and C-C. Line A-A is a vertical section line on the left side. Line B-B is a horizontal section line across the middle. Line C-C is a diagonal section line on the right side. The drawing is oriented horizontally, with the building's front facade facing right.

A detailed architectural line drawing of a two-story house. The house features a gabled roof with a chimney on the left side. A dormer window is located on the left side of the roof. The front facade has a central door on the ground floor and a large window above it. To the left of the central door is a staircase leading to the upper floor. On the far left, there is a small addition with a gabled roof and a window. To the right of the main house, there is a long, low extension with a flat roof and large windows. The drawing is a black and white line art style.

This architectural section drawing illustrates the internal structure and roof profile of a house. The drawing shows a gabled roof with a chimney on the left side. The interior is divided into several rooms, including a large living area with a fireplace, a kitchen, and a dining area. The drawing uses solid black lines for structural elements and hatching for areas like the chimney and the ground level.
