Comments: Mr Simms and his family are Hollington people. He was born on the homestead that is now the subject of this planning application. His father owned the land and it was inherited by Mr Simms and his family. Currently, Mr Simms and family members are building up a substantial carbon footprint travelling frequently from Cheadle to care for animals and to perform other duties. It would be more sustainable if they lived in Hollington. Rural crime is also a concern and being over three miles away is an issue in terms of quick reaction to crime. Caring for animals is not a predictable routine and can involve several journeys a day especially when there is illness requiring prompt reaction and involving vets.
