Comments: The noise and air pollution for this helicopter plan is absolutely awful for the location. People are saying that it will provide jobs and Stoke needs this kind of planning to go ahead however they are wrong for the location you're wanting to put it in. We do not like in a town or a village, we live in a small hamlet, we don't even have a local shop or cafe etc. I've lived in Cresswell for over 15 years and although it's generally a peaceful and quiet place to live, the ever growing traffic on the a50 already creates a lot of noise pollution in the area. If this went ahead we will be doubling (at least) the noise and air pollution. I live down a small country lane with only around 5/6 houses (between a mile) and if this goes ahead, our small lane will end up being used as a through route, which is going to be so dangerous for the animals and children that live down this road. I really think that the location for this should be reconsidered. Within Stoke there are various unused and abandoned building/ old factories etc that could be an ideal location for this. Along side the a500 is an old derelict building which is huge and would be a perfect place to build this as it's right on the side of a busy road perfect for small and large vehicles. The roads around Blythe park and in Cresswell were not and are not suitable for the size of vehicles and/ or the pure volume of vehicles this is going to bring.
