Comments: The local area is being islanded by extra housing, business and commerce which is killing the village life. Blythe Fields on one side with a number of increasing phases, the extra traffic and strain on local infrastructures and now this monstrosity at the other end of the village. However the roads will cope, goodness only knows and the safety of the local residents is a concern. It is bad enough as it is now to cross our roads, especially for the elderly, children and those with dogs. Draycott and Cresswell are meant to be villages and that term village will be destroyed by this, nature, wildlife, peace and tranquility. It is a preposterous idea and whoever has proposed this have evidently never lived or spent time within a village and has no understanding of this term or respect for its meaning.
