Comments: This is a residential area. This is not a suitable area for such a home. I have lived here since the estate opened and I can tell you that residents old and new are furious. A home for children with such issues requires a specialist site and it is not fair on both the children or the residents for it to be built here. It may be easy for you to push this one through since you do not live here but think about the residents. We do care about these children but this estate certainly isn't the place for it. If these children have behavioural issues and are allowed free passage of the estate, then what's stopping them performing damage to our property? I don't think that's an unreasonable question to ask. Are we supposed to just "put up" with it? And do you honestly think an estate full of strangers is truly the right place for children with emotional needs? I hope you reach the right conclusion here. Take a step back and think about it. This is a residential estate.
