Submission: Objection

Comments: To try and claim land rightfully owned by someone else is absolutely absurd. There was never a formal footpath through this land and yes I acknowledge many people used this land and think this was allowed by the previous owner however it was not and he was not happy about the people using his land he just did not have the means to stop people. However the new owner does have means to stop people and I believe is well within their right to do so as they have paid for said land and to think it can just be claimed is disgusting and I can't believe this application was allowed in the first place. Times are hard enough for farmers without people thinking they are entitled to something that is not theirs, we should be celebrating our local farmers and their efforts being a traditional market town not doing them out of hard earned money.
