The scale of multiple and cumulative applications for battery storage on green belt in the locality should be considered as a whole. The land in question is obviously conveniently located but this does not mean that it is the right use for the land. Such applications would preferably be done on brownfield land and not on valuable agricultural green belt land. This is highly likely to create noise and light pollution to an area that is green and peaceful therefore industrialising our natural local landscape.

I am very concerned about the affect that building on green belt land will have on our local wildlife habitats. This is semi rural area and home to many rare wildlife species. It is likely to create a loss of local wildlife.

The industrialisation of the landscape will negatively harm the character and appreciation of our local heritage assets. We should protect and recognise the character and beauty of our countryside and our heritage.

I support green energy production but strongly feel that there are more efficient and environmentally friendly ways to do so rather than being down to being done in conveniently located land near to a substation.
