Comments: The battery storage site poses a direct fire risk, as proven by previous sites all over the world using the same technology.

Not only will this have immediate effects to wildlife and the surrounding moorland, but also nearby residents would have to be evacuated in such an event due to the toxic fumes.

Battery sites are not a simple fire they can last for a long period of time causing further issues.

Also as a side note to this please consider the environmental impact that is incurred by sourcing the materials for these batteries.
