Comments: Proposed planning leads to destruction of the greenbelt and would be better served by placement on industrial sites or brownfield sites. Installation of solar panels should be better placed on buildings, over car parks etc which is in abundance, not on already limited greenfield sites. The proposed batteries and solar panels are not manufactured in the UK, the vast majority in China, where multiple new coal fired power stations are provide dirty power to produce our green power. The environmental damage to the planet is just shifted. Solar panels, lithium for batteries has a proven record of mining by children and other slave labour. These solar factories and their infrastructure will not benefit the many but will make a few insanely rich. Our rural green space will be harmed for ever due to the scale of industrialisation
