Comments: I completely understand this farmers needs. It is incredibly difficult to work land when you have no building in which to store equipment, crops or work - everything is disproportionately harder and more expensive.

We have increasing food security concerns in the UK and within reason the SMDC planning department should be working with those trying to feed the nation to make their task easier.

This farmer also clearly has the environment in mind and should be commended for aiming to go organic.

I wish him luck and the support of SMDC planning department.
