This is being built on productive agricultural land; it poses a risk to water supply for humans (local residents' only drinking water is from their bore hole) & to animals on the land.

It poses a direct risk to those living within 100m of it - if there was a fire due to the very toxic pollutants given off and the fact the fire services would leave it to burn out.

It will harm the wildlife in the area despite 'Biodiversity net gain', due to the 24 hour security lighting which will scare off barn owls and bats.

Once the farmland is gone, it's gone for good, and we need to preserve our healthy agricultural land for future generations.
