Comments: I have lived in the adjoining area for 50 years. During this time the land/field has been used for grazing for horses, sheep and cows. Horses have been exercised in the field with no disturbance to ourselves or the adjoining neighbours. The creation of a riding area within the field would cause no harmfulness to the open green belt, or its visual amenity. I have known horses to be kept in this field on and off for many years having lived in the area for most of my life. The wild animals in the area, including a small family of deer, happily co-exist without any problems. I see no problem with the planning application applied for as horses are part of the green belt environment and the exercising of them will cause no encroachment on the surrounding countryside. The land is well kept and fences are maintained and hedges kept tidily. The adjacent public footpath, used extensively by local schoolchildren and residents has also been constantly maintained by the landowner as documented by the Parish Council and I have no doubt that the exercise area will be kept in the same manner.
