Comments: We own the adjacent land and would like reassurance that any run off to ground or surface water is completely safe. Animals use the stream for drinking purposes in the summer - we have young cattle in the summer and they utilise the stream into which this will flow. This output from the proposed tank will enter ground and surface water and ultimately the local stream network. Will the tank be repeatedly require emptying of solids - this is not clear from the brochure? If so how often will this occur and is it practical- marshy land- especially in autumn/ winter months.
