Comments: The existing building in question to receive this extension, is indeed Victorian and quite a strategic land mark in Endon. It has previously been an office for a Leek company and prior to that, it was a solicitor's office, but notably it was a National Westminster bank for many years.

As a resident, living in close proximity to this property, I am really pleased to know that it has been bought by a local professional, who has applied for this well thought out extension to the rear, for his own physiotherapy business, which is quiet and unintrusive to the area in general and this rural location in particular.

From the plans shown, the extension will be complimentary to the main building, which will no doubt be restored to maintain its character and local history, without any major structural change. The size and shape of the extension is very sympathetic to the original structure, with similar gables and pitched roofs.

There is good parking available for the business clients who will attend for their treatment and use of this new gymnasium.

I for one, have no objections to the plans of this extension, or the business contained therein.
